

Head of Maths

Vanguard Prep School

This is a permanent position at the new charter school for Years 7 to 10 based in Albany, Auckland commencing in January 2027.

Vanguard Prep School is being established to bring opportunities to young people who would like a firm grounding in the basics of key curriculum areas which will enable them to enter senior secondary school ready for the rigours of obtaining senior qualifications.

While Vanguard Prep School is based on the successful model of Vanguard Military School (which has now been operational for ten years and has turned out hundreds of successful students), it is being pitched at a younger cohort who will develop the personal discipline and academic achievement to take them into any senior secondary school of their choice.

Teachers at Vanguard work in a collegial environment which is replicated by the students who are committed to the manaakitanga of the school.

Teachers can expect class sizes limited to 15-19 students. Behaviours are managed consistently throughout the school and are focussed on ensuring every student has the right and freedom to learn to the best of their ability.

The position is head of mathematics for the school. The person employed in this position will report directly to the Principal of the school. Working relationships will be with all other teachers in the school.

It will require someone who is familiar with the latest iteration of the mathematics curriculum and is able to develop programmes that will move students smoothly from their current abilities at Year 7 to being ready for senior school at the end of Year 10.

As the school has a focus on physical as well as mental wellbeing, all teachers are expected to engage with supporting students across all areas.

This is an exciting opportunity for teachers of mathematics to develop their skills and advance their opportunities in a welcoming and caring environment.

Applications close on 6th November.
